

WEDDED BY PROXY, DUTCH BRIDE COMES FOR REAL CEREMONY

Netherlands Queen Gave Pretty Girl Permission to Marry Man in New York.

Beaming, bright-eyed and blooming, Mrs. Henry G. Roel, whose age is an enviable twenty-two years, and who is a recently created "bride by the glove," stood at the rail of the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam to-day and gazed happily down into the crowd on the Holland-America pier.

Why should she not have been happy? Was not that Henry, himself, down there gazing up at her so adoringly? Was not the long six years of waiting for each other now at a beautiful conclusion? And had not the good Queen Wilhelmina granted them special permission to be married by proxy so that nothing might prevent the bride from coming here all by herself?

Yes, all these things were true, and therefore all was right with the world.

Henry and Rosetta A. Voorman have been sweethearts since the days back in Zwolle, Holland, when they were wooden shoes with straw tucked inside and frolicked together on the dikes. When Henry grew up and came to this country to work in the offices of the Holland-America Line it was understood that he was to return very soon and marry Rosetta, but the company needed his services here and could not spare him long enough to make the trip over to Holland for his bride. The years dragged on.

Finally the situation was so endured no longer, so they invoked the crown grant which had been inaugurated centuries ago when the settlers in the Dutch West Indies wanted to import a bride, and on Aug. 10 Rosetta and her uncle appeared before a notary in Zwolle and were "married," the uncle pinch-biting for Henry.

On that same day Henry went through a similar ceremony in the office of the Dutch Consul General at No. 9 Broadway. Then Rosetta started for New York.

After the first ecstatic moments of their meeting on the pier were over and the annoying delay of the customs examination overcome, the bridegroom whisked his bride away to Orange, where another ceremony this afternoon will make everything right, tight and proper, and the romance which began in Zwolle will be resumed in Woodbridge, N. J.

HOLLAND LINER RAN INTO ENGLISH PORT FOR 72 PASSENGERS

Nieuw Amsterdam's Captain
Was Careful About Distributing War News.

There were no war arguments on the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam of the Holland-America line, which arrived to-day from Rotterdam, via Falmouth, with 165 cabin passengers, 189 second-class, and 104 in the steerage. Captain Jan Baron saw to that. When a bit of pro-German news came in over the wireless he merely passed the information privately to those who he thought would be interested in it. If the news was favorable to the Allies he quietly told it to the British sympathizers. Thus everybody aboard thought he was full of secrets imparted to him by the captain, which must not be disclosed, and the only news on the bulletin board was the weather and the baseball scores.

The Nieuw Amsterdam is the first boat out of Rotterdam to take passengers aboard at Falmouth. She got seventy-two there. Prior to that she had been held up twenty-two hours in the Dows, but every one aboard passed the inspection of the British patrol. The rest of the trip passed without incident.

A. Pratt Andrews, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and now Field Superintendent of the American Ambulance Hospital in France, came over on the Nieuw Amsterdam to hire thirty more automobile drivers. He says the American boys have been of the utmost service in driving the motor ambulances and more of them are needed for the work. He will be here two weeks collecting them. He described graphically the shelling of a hospital by the Germans at Pont-a-Mousson, a rain of projectiles which continued for twelve hours, killing two of the French drivers, but sparing the Americans.

Mrs. Louise Frank, with her son, Ludwig, was aboard, coming to visit her husband, Capt. Max Frank of the North German Lloyd liner George Washington, which has been interned here since the war began.

FATHER AND SON MISSING.

Boy Went in Search of Man, and Both Disappeared.

Mrs. Margaret Bonner of No. 1133 Intervale Avenue, the Bronx, asked the Fifth Branch Detective Bureau yesterday to search for her son, Arthur, fourteen years old, who disappeared on Aug. 15. She said that her husband, John, disappeared the same day and that the boy went in search of his father and did not come home. She was without financial assistance, she added, and her family were hungry. Lieut. Duane and Detective Schueing made up a purse for her.
